

LIVESTOCK EMERGENCY RESPONSE WORKSHOP

Transport accidents involving livestock trailers present unique challenges for first responders. Animals that are injured, trapped or loose as the result of a vehicular accident require special consideration for the safety of all concerned. Experience has shown that responders with livestock emergency training can more confidently respond to these situations, in an organized and safe manner while minimizing the overall time on scene.

This course will cover trailer design and the implications for extrication points, animal behaviour, laws and regulations, euthanasia protocols, and how to develop response teams. This course is delivered by large animal rescue expert, Victor MacPherson, and is specially designed for first responders and emergency personnel. Class size is limited to 20 to ensure conversation/interaction with the instructor in a virtual presentation.

The following training workshops are open for registration:
